FASHION NEWS

You know how glimpsing your bright pedi makes you happy? Now think how much better – and frequent – those moments will be if it happened every time you checked your watch. Fossil has declared death to standard silver bracelets and fair-less faces, bringing out the perfect colour pop this summer. Drawing inspiration from analogue aviation instruments and vintage jewellery timepieces, the brand is brought bang up-to-date for bling-seekers, too, with clear resin and crystal accents.

Calling all show-offs: we're confident you'll love this summer trend, because your bikini top isn't relegated to poolside. Rochas's, ProenzaSchouler's and Nina Ricci's little Lycra scraps, either worn alone with a short skirt or covered with a very sheer top, has thrown up a voyeuristic dimension to this season's fashion offering. Keep whites and brights to the young, and match neutral shades instead for a much more sensual and grown-up take on the trend, like Fendi, Loewe and Stella McCartney did.

Bustiers and silk lace-trimmed camis were also worn as stand-alone daytime garments, using a natural colour palette, creating a sense of timeless elegance. They were teamed with pencil skirts or long wide trousers – and, of course, high, high heels. Very city chic.

in the softest of pale pinks, adding glorious femininity to the look. When trying this at home, remember to keep accessories to a minimum: in this instance less really is more.
